Resident of the Month:* Karyl Gertner

Karyl Karmen (Lindorff) Gertner was born on November 13, 1938 in Truman Mn. She grew up in Mankato with her parents Clarence and Elinor, and her older sister Karen. After graduating high school, she attended Waldorf College in Forest City, IA where she met the love of her life. She married Arlo Gertner on September 1, 1959 and moved to a small acreage outside of Westbrook, MN. (his hometown) She and her husband raised a variety of farm animals - horses, sheep, pigs, many kinds of poultry, milking mostly Jersey cows, and raising and selling hundreds of rabbits. Karyl worked as a secretary and was active in music at her church and with the Sweet Adelines Barbershop singing group. Together they enjoyed camping and attending Barbershop shows and conventions. Karyl's husband passed away in 2018 and in 2019 she moved to an apartment in Shakopee to be closer to some of her children. She has been living at Friendship Manor since April of 2025. Karyl has five children: Kim, Karla, Kami, Garth, and Kari. She has 14 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

EL NIÑO: EXPLAINED

What does this mean for Minnesota's

Minnesota stuck in the middle:

One of the most direct ways El Niño affects Minnesota is through the jet stream. During a strong El Niño, the wintertime jet stream tends to split into two branches — one tracking far to the north and another dipping toward the U.S.-Mexico border.

"Rather than having the wintertime jet stream tracking right over the center of North America, where we get hammered by a bunch of winter storms, you end up having one stream that ends up way to the north and then another stream way to our south near the Mexico kind of U.S. border, where it tends to get very wet and kind of inclement," Blumenfeld said.

That leaves Minnesota in the middle — typically with milder air and inconsistent precipitation.

"We tend to have warm winters during that time with kind of inconsistent precipitation," Blumenfeld said. "Hard to access some of the cold air."

Again.....

A great success for our Friendship Manor's Annual Picnic!
